MARBLE MILL BURNS.

The "Palace" mill of the Vermont Marble Co. at West Rutland, one of the oldest of the many structures operated by the concern, was gutted by fire Friday with a loss of $50,000. The marble walls were left standing but all of the interior woodwork was consumed, the roof fell in and much valuable machinery and stock were ruined. The fire started near some of the machinery, probably from a hot box. Some new apparatus was installed Thursday and it is believed that the blaze had its inception in this. In the oil soaked timbers the fire spread with great rapidity and by the time the volunteer hose companies arrived the whole interior was in flames.

The burned mill was a short distance east of the office. It was erected in the seventies by the late Charles Sheldon and for many years was one of the largest mills operated by the company. Lately it had contained 20 gangs and all were in operation when the fire broke out. Some of the blocks of marble which were being sawed were of great value but are rendered useless by subjection to heat and smoke. The machinery is reduced to a mass of junk.

Tuesday, August 29, there will be a parade of the uniform rank, the biggest parade probably in the history of the domain in Vermont. Several companies of the domains of New Hampshire and Massachusetts are expected to attend and march. Sightseeing by auto and other entertainment features will be events of the day.

Wednesday, August 30, at eight o'clock, representatives and past chancellors will be invited to receive the Grand Lodge rank. Before the rank is conferred they will present their credentials to the committee.
